Sirs:

I have watched over the years as Microsoft has crushed one competitor after another. It troubles me greatly that the Justice Department had clearly proven that this was done unethically and now you are essentially abdicating the case. Microsoft was shown to be lying several times in court, yet the "penalty" is nothing more than a request that Bill be nice for a while. The company is so devious that what you consider to be restrictions will be twisted into license for further dominance.

Now that Microsoft is well on its way to software monopoly, it is beginning to enter the hardware market also. Examples are the XBox and the tablet PC. It will never rest until it is stopped by force or there is no more competition, and even then it will be vigilant to stamp out any possibility.

I believe you have abdicated, probably in the hope of large political contributions. I am thankful for a few state attorneys general who are standing to fight for freedom and truth.

Sincerely,

Nate Schwenk
